MEET DR. BHARAT H. SANGANI

Chairman and Founder

I want to share with you my vision of two Encores: One concerns our business, while the other is all about our culture.

First, let me discuss our business. From the beginning, my partner, Patrick Barber, and I shared a vision: to create a vertically-integrated, actively managed commercial real estate operating company that could generate superior returns by acquiring, repositioning and developing select assets in markets with the potential for significant value enhancement. Now we have over 1000 employees, assets under management well in excess of $1.1 billion, plenty of liquidity, no legacy assets, and an enviable performance track record. Since Encore's founding in 1999, we have acquired and developed $2.4 billion of real estate. We have exceeded our goals and believe that the future is brighter than ever.

That is the business. Now I now want to discuss something which is even more important to me and Pat—the culture. Before we started the business, I was a successful cardiologist, born and raised in Mumbai, India, who wanted to share in the American dream and believed then, as I do now, that anything is possible in this great country. I built a successful and growing medical practice in Gulfport, Mississippi, and began investing in real estate. I met Pat who had up to that time built a distinguished real estate career of his own. We passionately wanted to create something truly special, a self-sustaining company built upon integrity. We asked: Is there some way we could make the world a better place?

Now, you may remark, many firms talk about integrity; what I am saying may sound trite, especially in these cynical times, but at Encore we really live by our principles. Our colleagues are incredible. We recruit exceptionally talented people who share our values; we keep our promises; and we embrace service to others.

Is there a secret ingredient? Yes, there is. If there is something special about Encore, it is the culture, and that is the source of my deepest pride. Encore's culture is the personality of the company and includes the company's mission, values, ethics, expectations, goals, and work environment.

I invite you to learn more about Encore.

Sincerely,

Bharat Sangani, Chairman and Founder

MEET PATRICK J. BARBER

President and CEO

Bharat—everyone calls him “Doc”—is obsessed with culture and with good reason. Culture is the glue that keeps Encore together; it attracts innovative people and guides discretionary behavior. When people walk into Encore’s Dallas headquarters, they know that Encore is a different place. We are an exceptional team and not an assemblage of individuals. Our culture, in large measure, accounts for our extraordinary performance.

Encore is still a secret to many, even though we launched the company in 1999. We have enjoyed phenomenal growth and top performance. Why, then, have we not shouted our success from the roof tops? Complacency makes us anxious and caution is part of our culture.

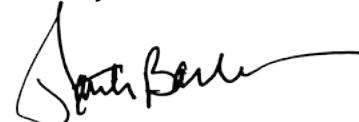

We invest nationally, but think globally because real estate is more than just location. We have turned down hundreds of millions of dollars of equity because the timing just did not feel right. We have made exceptional timing decisions, all of which were the product of unrelenting debate, good governance, and a commitment to evidence-based thinking. Culture continues to play a big role.

Our timing has been impeccable. Two weeks after 9/11, Encore, despite market paralysis, acquired eleven strong Marriott hotels at a steep discount from a financially troubled hotel management company. In 2005, Encore consummated a joint venture with a major institutional investor. In August of that year, Hurricane Katrina devastated the Gulf Coast, where, at that time, we were headquartered, but Encore still proceeded with the purchase of the $265 million portfolio. Our institutional partner in 2006 sought to increase its equity commitment from $80 million to $500 million. We feared a market bubble (and crash), so instead of investing additional capital, we decided to sell our entire portfolio; the firm executed the sale in August 2007. Our institutional partner exceeded their projected returns and every team member at Encore participated in the profits from that sale.

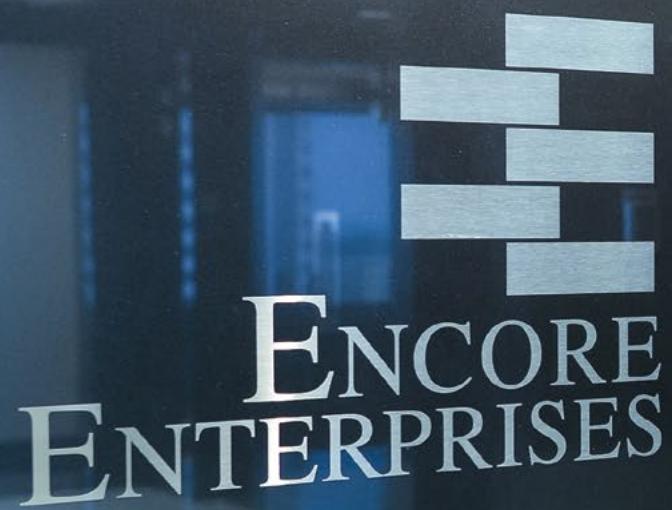

Looking back, we weathered the crash; we thrived while others faltered; we built cash reserves; and when fear gripped the market, we acquired and developed over $460 million of great assets and invested millions more in technology and people. Unlike many one-time proud investment firms, we have no legacy issues. We adapt quickly while others hesitate. All of these happy events are the result of a strong culture.

When we say we love our business, Doc and I really mean it, and so does our entire team. Come and visit us in Dallas; you will then see why culture really makes a difference.

Sincerely,

Patrick Barber, President and CEO

ENCORE MILESTONES

INVESTMENT STRATEGY

Encore is a real estate investment company which focuses on several property types including hospitality, office, multi-family and retail.

Encore's investment style is either value-add or opportunistic. The former includes the acquisition of existing properties with substantial vacant space, aggressively leasing or releasing space, providing for necessary capital expenditures, and recapitalizing the asset.

Opportunistic strategies include land entitlement and development. Depending on whether portfolios sell at a discount or premium to net asset value and the temporary expansion of spreads between development costs and exit cap rates, the firm will acquire portfolios of existing properties or developable land.

Encore co-invests substantial equity in all of its transactions.

Encore only develops when conditions are favorable; otherwise we sell assets, pursue value-add transactions, or just remain on the sidelines, as we have in the past.

Rather than operating superficially across myriad markets, our teams focus on fewer markets, which enables them to dive deeply into the ownership structure of a market and identify more off-market opportunities, including distressed assets.

Each property group is functionally self-contained, but works synergistically with other groups and draws upon the full resources of the company, including capital, research, performance reporting, technology, banking, and accounting.

Property groups, each of which has impressive experience in value-add and development transactions, are able to toggle between these two investment styles depending on market conditions and which style provides the best risk-adjusted returns. If the market rests at a point of inflection in the property cycle and we believe price changes are imminent, the property team, under the guidance of the Investment Committee, determines whether it makes sense to remain on the sidelines or sell.

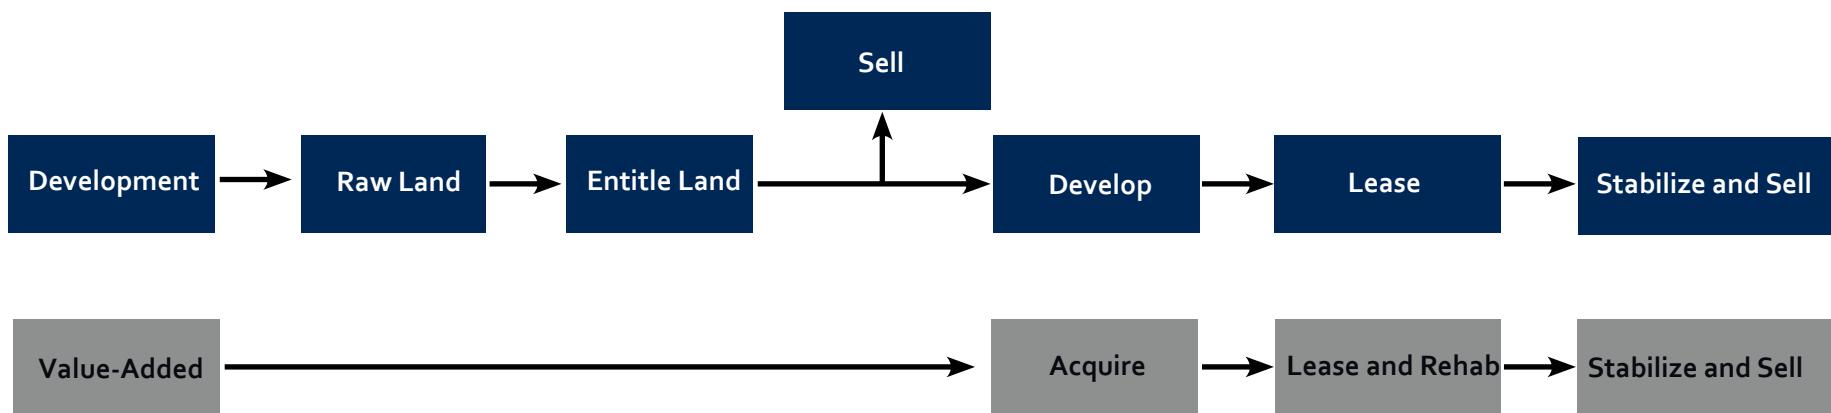

Research, which is distributed across all functions of the firm, is a systematic, evidenced-based way of thinking about problems and turning these problems into investment opportunities. Research at Encore is the backbone of investing. The firm invests substantial resources in its research function, which spans the granular details of a single deal and the complexities of global capital markets.

Our success reflects the following principles:

- Remain true to your investment style.
- Invest when markets are in disarray, market liquidity is low, and price discovery is impaired.
- Buy below replacement cost and seek out great assets in weak financial hands.
- Wait indefinitely rather than make a bad investment out of compulsion.

ENCORE COMMERCIAL

Encore Commercial, LLC focuses on the acquisition, ownership, development, redevelopment, and asset management of retail and Class A commercial office buildings across the United States. Acquisition and development properties with value added potential, credit anchored tenants, and good locations in primary, secondary, and tertiary markets that yield higher market cap rates is the focus for retail locations while office building acquisition is further complemented by plans for new development projects in an effort to build a diversified portfolio of assets.

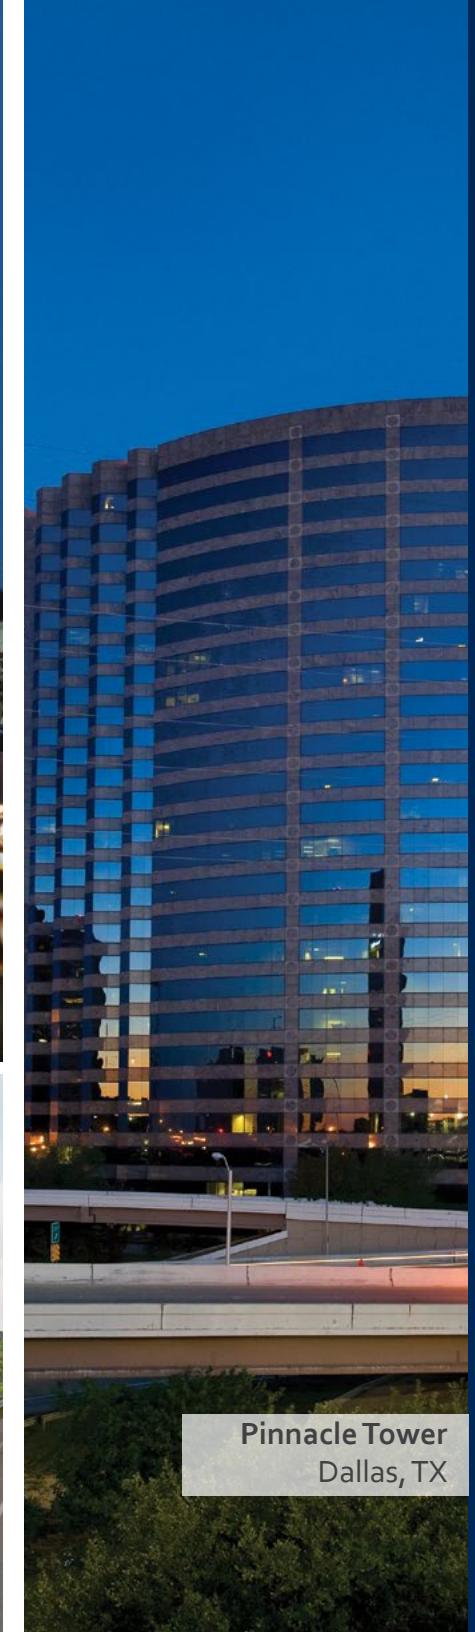

Encore Commercial offers coast-to-coast program management, site selection, and analytics to provide quality locations, property contract negotiations, cost and "build-ability" due diligence, legal and entitlements, design, permitting, and construction management for the following sectors:

- Neighborhood and Community Retail Shopping Centers
- Mixed-use developments
- Single-tenant retail developments
- Class A Commercial Office buildings

Encore Commercial seeks only high-quality, well-located office projects with in-place positive cash flow plus value-add potential that can be acquired at a discount to replacement cost in order to achieve our investment objectives.

The management team consists of proven leaders in acquiring, developing, financing, negotiating, leasing and managing retail and office assets.

DEVELOPMENT/VALUE-ADDED

ENCORE HOSPITALITY

Encore Hospitality, LLC is an acquisition, development, and asset management company focusing on the upper mid-priced, branded select-service and full-service hotel sector. Encore Hospitality has one of the most seasoned management teams in the industry. The team has extensive experience in value-add and development strategies; it is equally proficient in stand-alone and mixed-use hotel strategies.

Starting in 1999, Encore significantly increased the Company's hospitality portfolio from seven hotel assets to as many as forty-one.

Hotels require the continual active management of capital expenditures, marketing, and room sales. The team has impressive management experience in these areas and knows how to create incremental value. For example, a significant portion of the net proceeds of Encore's August 2007 portfolio sale reflected the team's timely purchase and professional management of the firm's hotel portfolio.

Since Encore has embedded many self-contained but centrally managed property groups, Encore and its investors can capture the unique synergies and beneficial spillovers derived from the joint development or redevelopment of various property types, including hotels.

ENCORE MULTI-FAMILY

Encore Multi-Family, LLC, founded in 2008, is a full-scale multi-family developer. The company's capabilities include multi-family developments and acquisitions, including ground-up developments, value-added acquisitions, joint ventures, mixed use, and urban infill communities.

Encore Multi-Family has one of the most seasoned management teams in the industry.

The Multi-Family team delivers quality work on time and on budget. The Multi-Family team combines the personal attention of a small firm with the resources of a large firm. Members of this team have trained with the nation's top multi-family developers and amassed an impressive transaction and performance resume. Rather than superficially operate across many markets, it focuses on fewer markets in which its knowledge of off-market, distressed situations is superior.

The choice of renting or owning is one that is very sensitive to demographics and lifestyle issues, relative prices, macroeconomic conditions, personal income and household wealth. The team has experience acquiring, repositioning, or developing single family, condominiums, as well as multi-family properties. All of these property types are, to varying degrees, near substitutes; knowing how to recognize and exploit short-term market imbalances is a signature skill.

ENCORE RESEARCH

What is the purpose of research? Research is systematic, evidence-based inquiry; at Encore it forms the backbone of every investment decision. The purpose of research is to provide a competitive edge to all facets of the investment process, to enhance value, and to manage and price risk. Research has a dual focus: the broad economic and capital market forces that drive value and local and regional economic drivers.

Research at Encore consists of (1) property market research to estimate the levels and rates of growth of rents and other deal parameters; (2) portfolio research to explore ways to incorporate real estate within a multi-asset portfolio; (3) capital markets, which includes the study of capital flows, capitalization rates, and capital market strategies; and (4) risk management, which analyzes and manages potential losses.

Property market research. Markets are always in disequilibrium, and they slowly reestablish balance. This adjustment process is a complex dynamic incorporating subtle simultaneity, feedback loops, leads and lags. Since property development, especially large office development, involves long lags, the careful study of market dynamics and rental growth paths is essential. We generate metropolitan as well as submarket supply and demand market gap forecasts to help guide our investment decisions.

Property markets are cyclical; they are rarely synchronized. Encore periodically reviews for each property market and property type the best investment strategy. Sometimes it makes sense to develop; at other times, value-add acquisitions are more desirable given the cost to build.

Property market scenario analysis. Encore models the supply and demand dynamics of metropolitan property markets using sophisticated econometric methods tempered by experience and market knowledge. Property performance reflects these dynamics. Our approach bookends a strong bottom-up analysis with a series of macro, or top down, scenario forecasts to test the validity and internal consistency of deal assumptions, including exit capitalization rates.

Portfolio research. Encore is a leader in real estate portfolio research. Investors always ask Encore: What is the appropriate portfolio allocation for property? Since real estate can be public or private, equity or debt, the answer to this question is not straightforward, especially when we consider investor liabilities and aversion to loss. Optimizing the performance of the portfolio's surplus—assets minus liabilities—introduces new, even counter-intuitive complexities: safer assets may be risky and higher risk assets may be safer in the context of liabilities.

Risk assessment. The English dramatist, William Gilbert, of Gilbert and Sullivan, once wrote, "Things are seldom what they seem; Skim milk masquerades as cream." Investment risk is no exception. Investors frequently ask, what is the likelihood of a capital loss or negative return? Encore embraces the explicit and rigorous assessment (and pricing) of risk using Monte Carlo and other simulation techniques. We actually analyze risk-adjusted returns; we do not just talk about it.

We focus on a number of sources of risk, which include lease default, the likelihood and associated cost of development delay, the choice of floating versus fixed rated debt, optimal portfolio mix, hedging, valuation of guarantees as a function of LTV, valuation of real options (including the option to expand, the option to postpone, and the option to sell a development project), lease renewal and extension options, and optimal working capital and other reserves.

We occasionally use sophisticated risk simulation techniques, such as Monte Carlo analysis, to evaluate complex transactions. Static analysis, which is the industry standard, usually fails to convey the true extent or implications of risk; in fact, it often masks risk.

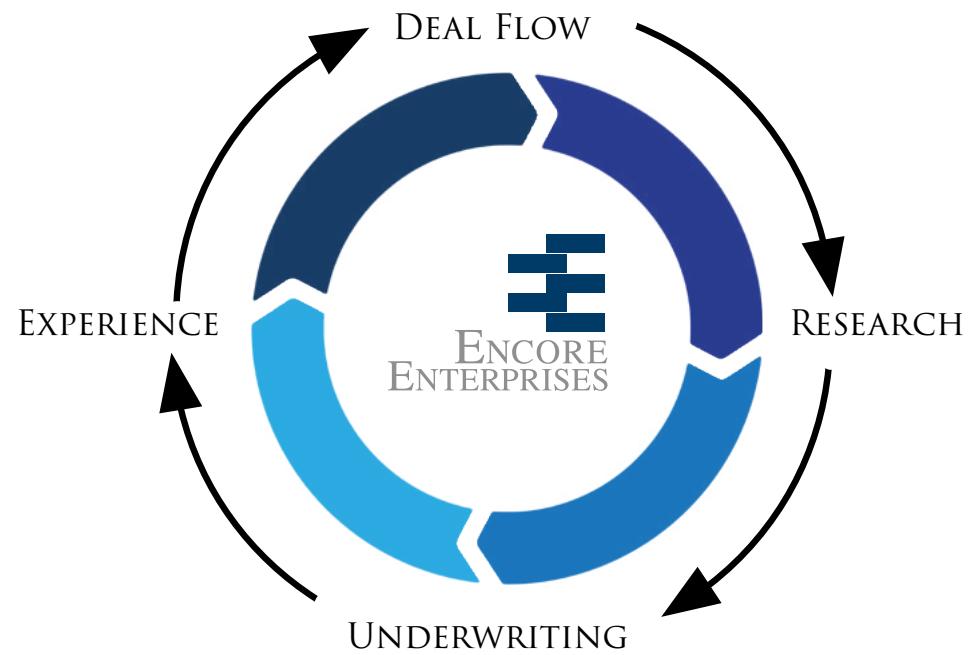

VETTING THE DEAL

Deal Flow. Encore has a strong history of transactional performance, which has resulted in a wide network of relationships with brokers, owners, management companies, and vendors throughout the industry. It is with these relationships that Encore has prime access to a number of opportunities, many of which are not widely marketed. With each opportunity, Encore evaluates and underwrites them rigorously prior to presenting to the investment committee and board of directors, and ultimately our joint venture partners and co-investors.

Research. Encore is a research-driven firm. Research is critical in all phases of real estate, which at Encore include value-add acquisitions, development, asset management, recapitalization, and dispositions. Anticipating change in global capital and local property markets through the use of rigorous analytical tools and proprietary databases help us assess relative value, manage and mitigate risk, and determine the price at which we are a buyer or a seller. We subscribe to all the major industry standard research sources, such as CoStar Portfolio Strategy, Axiometrics, Lodging Econometrics, REIS as well as several others. We synthesize those sources with local intelligence through our strong network of broker and industry relationships to develop our market outlook at the MSA, submarket and "cross-street" level.

Underwriting. Encore's underwriting team is comprised of strong, disciplined risk management professionals with institutional backgrounds. They focus on generating financial models and analysis of potential joint venture structures, single asset/portfolio acquisitions and development projects, across all the major real estate sectors. The team leads the presentation of deals to the investment committee and board, and manages the transaction process through due diligence, closing and funding. As an integral part of the transaction team, the underwriters also manage the debt placement process, and interface with the capital markets teams to structure the optimal mix of debt and equity for each deal.

Experience. Encore's professional teams are seasoned experts in every facet of commercial real estate acquisitions and development. The platform is vertically integrated, and includes in-house operations, property management, asset management, and construction. The execution of each asset's business plan is not out-sourced to others, but performed internally with on demand reporting and oversight by our senior management team. Our unique knowledge of each sector we invest in has guided us to buy and sell properties in times and markets that appear less than ideal, but ultimately produces beneficial outcomes for our co-investors.

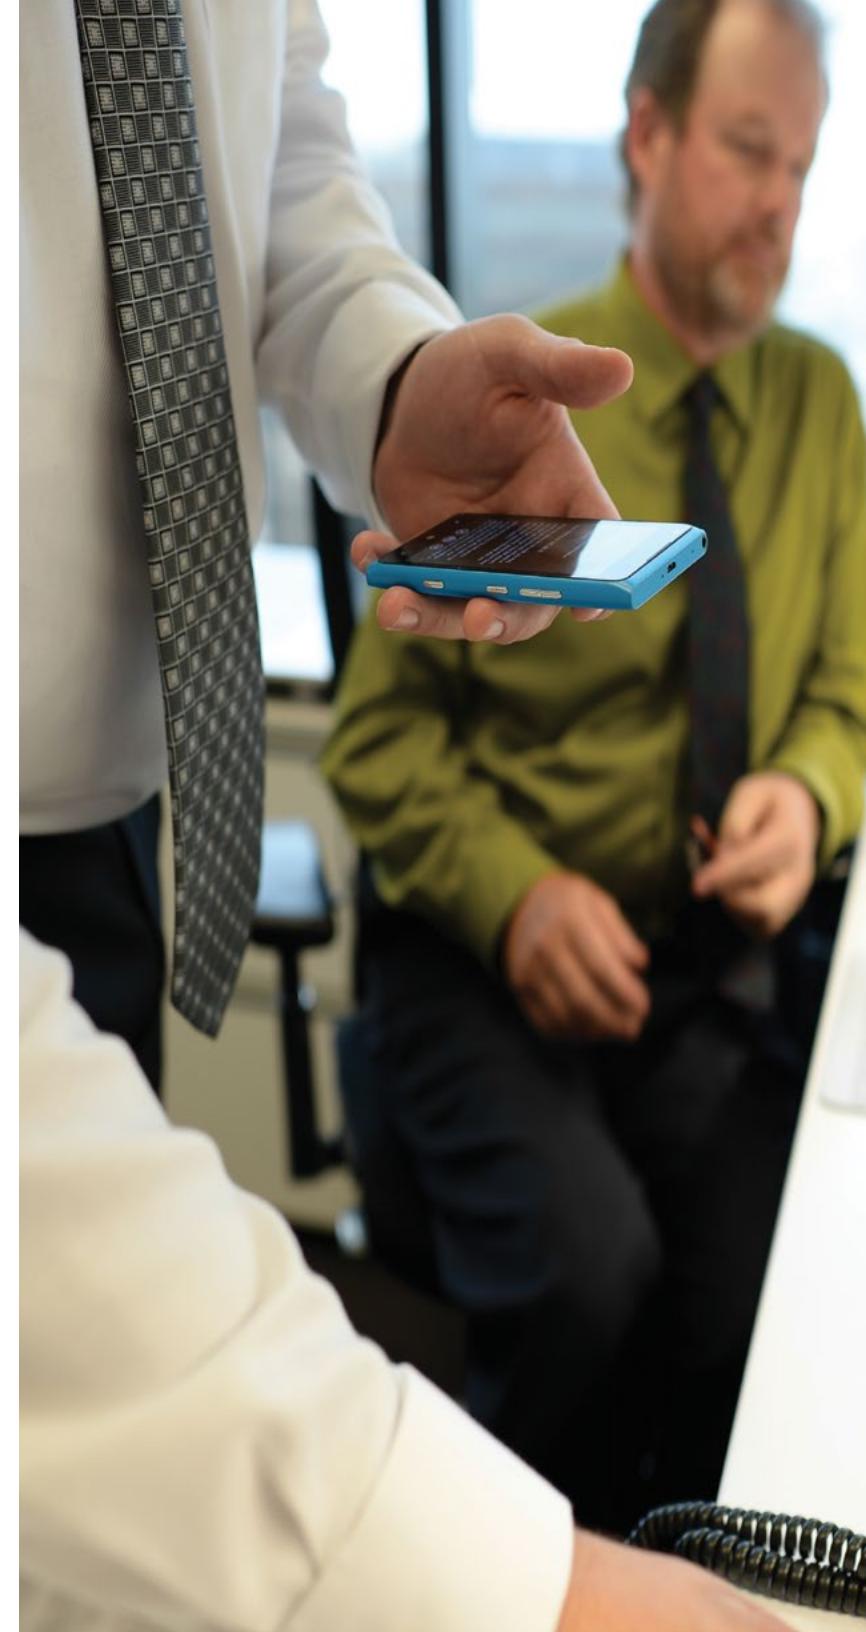

ENCORE ASSET MANAGEMENT

Asset management is a critical function because once the firm commits to an investment, be it a value-add or development strategy, asset management must oversee and manage the investment's performance. Encore has adopted a distributed asset management function wherein each property group manages its own asset management strategy. Encore has a matrix organizational structure; the property group manages the day-to-day operations of asset management and the holding company, through its executive management team, oversees all corporate governance and monitors financial performance.

We embrace technology because, when used well, it increases efficiency and promotes the diffusion of information, which is the life blood of our business. Encore has invested a great deal of capital in systems, performance reporting, information technology, and risk management tools because we are first and foremost investors and not fee-based asset managers. We are grateful nevertheless that institutional and high net worth investors alike applaud our commitment to state-of-the art technology.

Encore has been an industry leader in its quest for paperless management systems.

Over the last five years the firm has completely transferred its applications to the cloud, enabling the company to use best-in-class applications to maximize productivity and to enhance its internal control and reporting systems.
